The North Carolina Community Health Center Association has named Paul Trani, M.D., of Blue Ridge Community Health Services its "2010 Outstanding Provider." This award recognizes an outstanding health center provider each year. Candidates for the award, including physicians, mid-level practitioners, nurses and dentists, should demonstrate, over a period of time, a level of excellence and performance that sets them apart in a distinctive manner.

Trani has been with BRCHS for six years as a board certified pediatrician. He also functions as the medical director of three school-based health centers and has been a major force in the creation of a fourth center to be opened in August.

Trani

Trani serves on the board of the Children and Family Resource Center, a local non-profit, and is a team member of the United Agenda for Children, which is a three-year initiative dedicated to making sure every child in Henderson County is safe, healthy and well educated.
